Institute for Research in the Humanities
University of Wisconsin-Madison
Resident Fellowship
Call for Applications 2020-2021

DEADLINE: Thursday, October 3, 2019

Online applications only. Access application information and form at the Institute website in late July 2019: <https://irh.wisc.edu/irh-fellowships/>

The Institute for Research in the Humanities at the University of Wisconsin-Madison is pleased to announce its annual competition for up to six one-semester Resident Fellowships for UW-Madison faculty in the College of Letters and Science who are working on a project of significance for the humanities. These Resident Faculty Fellowships will be granted for semesters within the 2020-2021 academic year. UW-Madison faculty budgeted outside the College of Letters and Science may also apply for Resident Fellowships, contingent upon agreement from their deans or department chairs to continue their salary during the duration of the fellowships. Resident Fellows receive their regular salary and are released from teaching and service duties for the semester of the fellowship so that they may undertake full-time research and participate in the intellectual life of the interdisciplinary community at the Institute. Fellows with additional funding (e.g., sabbatical, other grants) are invited to remain at the Institute for the academic year. However, the fellowship may not be deferred for any reason. These fellowships are prestigious appointments and represent one of the ways the College of Letters and Science seeks to strengthen the opportunities for concentrated research by faculty in the humanities.

Resident Fellows are expected to attend the weekly Monday afternoon seminars (3:30-5:00 PM) and to present their work at one of these meetings. A follow-up lunch discussion is held every Tuesday (Noon-1:00 PM) for those interested in further discussing the Monday seminar. Resident Fellows are also encouraged to attend other Institute events, as time and interest permit. Please consult the Institute's website (irh.wisc.edu) for more information about other Institute fellowships and activities.

Individual faculty members on the tenure-track or tenured at UW-Madison are encouraged to apply. Departmental nominations are accepted but do not necessarily increase the chances of success; departments should encourage all eligible faculty to apply without consideration of the number of applicants in each unit. The Institute seeks the most exciting research projects from candidates who can contribute to and benefit from the interdisciplinary conversation in the humanities that the Institute fosters.

Eligibility

UW-Madison Resident Fellow applicants must be tenured or tenure-track members of the UW-Madison faculty, must be engaged in scholarship in the humanities, and must be prepared to commit themselves to full participation in Institute seminars for the period of the appointment. UW-Madison faculty budgeted outside the College of Letters and Science may also apply for Resident Fellowships, and, if selected, they will need to provide evidence of funding through their own college or school. All applicants must have completed two years on the tenure track or as tenured faculty at UW-Madison before submitting an application.

Projects should be situated clearly within the humanities, which we define broadly to include disciplinary and interdisciplinary scholarship on history, literature, visual and performing art, visual and material culture, philosophy, religion, politics and language. In addition to applications in the humanities, applications in the social and natural sciences will be considered if they demonstrate a potential for comparative, theoretical, and/or interdisciplinary conversation with the humanities. Proposals in the performing and creative arts are not generally supported, but such projects with a substantive research component in the humanities will be considered. Proposals involving a revision of the doctoral dissertation should involve major expansion, extensive new research, and/or substantive reconceptualization. All applicants should demonstrate their interest in and ability to contribute to an interdisciplinary humanities environment.

The Institute accepts applications from former Resident or Race, Ethnicity, and Indigeneity (REI) Fellows after seven years from the end date of their prior fellowship. Those who were Resident or REI Fellows in 2011-2012 season or before are eligible to apply this fall for 2020-2021 fellowships.

Former Senior Fellows are eligible to apply for a Resident or REI Fellowship after ten years from the end of their Senior Fellowship. Senior Fellowships which ended in 2009 or before may apply this fall for 2020-2021 Resident or REI Fellowships.

Somewhat higher standards will be applied for previous recipients of IRH fellowships.
